Rose Publishing in Torrance Designated a “Best Christian Workplace”

Rose Publishing, a Torrance-based publishing company, has been named as one of the best Christian workplaces, according to an annual review by Best Christian Workplaces Institute. The Christian institute is a national organization that reviews faith-based companies on whether “employees experience healthy, even flourishing workplace cultures,” according to their website.

President Gretchen Goldsmith expressed her appreciation: “We feel truly honored. We have an excellent staff, but we never expected to achieve this designation our first year,” said Goldsmith. “We are grateful.”

Best Christian Workplaces Institute made their selections based on the overall happiness and significance employees found in their job. According to the institute’s president, Al Lopus, the awarded companies have “rich day-to-day relationships and fellowship are particularly meaningful. . . . employees give more of their energy, creativity and passion on their job.”

The leading Christian book publishing company based out of Torrance, CA, was one of only three Christian organizations in the State of California that made the list of certified “Best Christian Workplaces” for the institute’s 13th annual survey.

More than 100 organizations applied for the best Christian workplace certification and 58 were awarded the designation.

Since 2002, Best Christian Workplace Institute have surveyed more than 150,000 employees from 640 organizations worldwide, including the United States, Canada and South Africa.
